Ryan,

This delay will not be used to argue against Plaintiffs. We requested the financial data that we agreed to supplement soon after our meet and confer call at the end of October.

We received an incorrect set of data from the Google finance and accounting team and had to ask them to rerun it. The YTD numbers you requested aren't kept by Google for AdMob so they have to run a custom report, which caused some additional unexpected delay. I can assure you none of this is by design.

We are still working with Google's finance teams on producing the data. We have been in contact with them several times over the last several weeks and they told us this week (during the holidays) that they could not meet the close of month deadline, but they can get it done by the second week of January, after which we will immediately get it produced to you.

We are working as quickly as we can and will provide a concrete date for production when we have one.

Thank you,
Argemira

Counsel —

Google should be able to produce this data now. It has been three months since Q3 ended, and Google agreed to produce this information even before that. Google previously represented that it typically takes only a couple of weeks after the close of a quarter to prepare financial data. When we reminded Google of this outstanding production on November 22, Google did not respond. When we asked Google again on December 2, Google responded that it would produce this data in December. If the holidays now make that difficult, that is a problem of Google's own making.

Plaintiffs are concerned that Google obstructed the finalization of Lasinski's supplemental report in order to manufacture a meritless argument of prejudice. Has counsel yet asked Google to pull the Q3 financial data? If so, when did counsel ask? And why hasn't Google yet satisfied counsel's request?

Thanks,
Ryan

Thanks, Argemira. As you know, we have been seeking this data from Google so that we can finalize and serve the supplemental Lasinski report. We would like to do that as soon as possible, and this seems to be the only hold up. Our understanding is that it should have taken only a couple weeks after the conclusion of the quarter to compile. If you can follow up with Google so that this data can be produced as soon as possible, we would appreciate it. Please keep us posted.

Best,
Ryan

Thank you. We have been reviewing and we'll let you know ASAP if we have any follow-up questions.

When does Google anticipate producing financial figures supplemented to run through the end of the class period?
